Part 1: The Past —— Tearing Off the Painted Skin of History

Chapter 1: The Greatest Illusion of Humanity – From "Naked" to "Advanced" Slavery

Our history textbooks are filled with a colossal lie.

Those court-appointed scholars and literati have, for generations, indoctrinated the common people with a false "theory of evolution": They claim that human society is constantly progressing. We transitioned from a barbaric primitive society to a slave society; then we overthrew the slaveholders and established a feudal society; finally, we bid farewell to the emperors and moved toward today's "collectivism," "authoritarian system," or the so-called "dictatorial state."

They describe this as a leap in civilization. But if we tear off this painted skin of "golden ages," "rising powers," and various "isms," and examine the foundational operating logic of this land, we will discover a bone-chilling truth:

From the very first tribal chief who swung his club, to Qin Shi Huang who unified the empire, all the way to the dictators sitting in the halls of power today... the system on this land has never truly progressed. From beginning to end, through and through, it has always been exactly one system: slavery.

Why? Because the sole criterion for judging whether a society is a slave society does not depend on whether the common people wear physical iron chains, nor does it depend on whether they wear coarse linen or fine business suits every day. The only criterion for slavery lies in whether you have the right to choose, and whether you have the freedom to engage in an equal dialogue.

1. The Magic Mirror of Slavery: You Have No "Right to Bargain" What is a slave? A slave is someone who must do exactly whatever the other party commands them to do. You have no right to resist, no right to dialogue, and at its core, you have absolutely no "room to bargain." In a true society based on free contracts, individuals are equal to each other, and the people are equal to the government. How much tax the government wants to collect, what laws it wants to enact, and how it plans to spend that money—all must be negotiated with the common people, and the people have the right to say "no." But over the past two thousand years, whether the rulers called themselves "emperors" or "leaders," their communication with the common people has always been unilateral commands. When they want to expropriate your land, seal your door, or take away your wealth, you can only accept it on your knees. If you dare to stand up and demand equal dialogue or try to bargain, you are committing "insubordination against imperial decrees" and "picking quarrels and provoking trouble." When facing public power, if you can only unilaterally obey and forever lose your right to bargain, then you are a slave. Whether you are in the Colosseum of ancient Rome or in a modern high-end office building, there is absolutely no essential difference.

2. The Absolute Monopoly of Violence: The Legal Meat Grinder Why have the common people been forced to accept this "zero bargaining power" for thousands of years? Because the rulers hold in their hands a powerful machinery of violence that ordinary people are utterly incapable of resisting. In early slavery, slaveholders relied on whips and private armies. But in the so-called feudal system and the modern dictatorial system—which is "advanced slavery"—the rulers upgraded their violence. They monopolized the military, controlled the police, and draped this violence in a sacred cloak—they called it "the law." This "law" was not enacted with the consent of the common people; rather, it is a tool used by the rulers to punish the disobedient. If you dare to disobey, they no longer just lash you with a whip; instead, they can mobilize the state machinery to legally, legitimately, and compliantly impose sanctions on you, arrest you, put you on trial, and even deprive you of your life. Faced with this absolute, crushing violence, the common people have lost any physical capability for self-defense and resistance, reduced to meat on a chopping block.

3. The Ultimate Hegemony of Interpretation: Calling a Stag a Horse The most vicious trick of advanced slavery lies not in violent suppression, but in the fact that "the entirety of the right to interpretation rests on their side." This is the dictator's absolute monopoly on truth: What he says is black, is black; what he says is white, is white; if he says you are a hero, you are a hero; if he says you are a class enemy, you are a class enemy. Even if he solemnly swore yesterday that a certain thing was right, and today he suddenly changes his mind and decides it is wrong, you still have to hail his brilliance. In short, his word is final. Under this system, common sense is obliterated, logic is twisted, and the common people are even stripped of the right to define their own suffering. When your brain and your mouth are forcibly represented by others, how could you possibly not be a slave?

4. The Farm Scam: From "Naked" to "Advanced" Once we see through these three essential characteristics (zero bargaining power, violent suppression, and monopolized interpretation), we will understand: Early slave societies were naked, straightforward slavery. The slaveholder directly declared: "I own your physical body." This easily provoked resistance, and management costs were extremely high. However, the feudal society following the Qin system, as well as the current authoritarian dictatorial system, are an evolved "advanced slavery." The rulers pretend to give you a little personal freedom, letting you farm, work, and pay off your mortgage. They no longer say they own your body, but through the household registration (Hukou) system, extremely high taxation, and the monopolization of all resources, they firmly choke you by the neck. They have turned the entire country into a massive super-farm. On this farm, we are no longer called slaves; we are called "subjects," "the masses," "labor forces," or even coldly referred to as "human mines" (human resources to be mined). History hasn't progressed at all; it's just that the slaveholders have become more cunning, and the slaves' shackles have transformed into invisible nanomaterials. As long as the three malignant tumors of "top-down rule," "zero bargaining power," and "violence monopoly" still exist, no matter how they whitewash it, the ordinary people on this land are still struggling in the endless cycle of advanced slavery. And today, our objective is to completely tear off this fig leaf and shred the two-thousand-year-old painted skin of power into pieces!

Chapter 2: The Evolution of Robbers and "The Emperor's New Clothes"

If we completely shatter the filter of history and set aside those obscure academic terms, the so-called "slave society" in the early stages of humanity was actually extremely simple and brutal—it was a society built entirely on the logic of bandits and robbers.

It was nothing more than the naked exploitation of ordinary people by a group that controlled the machinery of violence. There was no reasoning to be had; whoever held the handle of the knife was the master. However, these robber chieftains later discovered that establishing authority through daily killings was too exhausting, so they learned the art of "packaging." They found a group of eloquent shamans or literati who packaged the grand robber chieftain as the true Dragon Emperor with a "divine mandate from heaven," and packaged the second-in-command and third-in-command as nobles, ministers, and tribal elders of "noble blood." But if you strip away these magnificent titles, you only need to understand the so-called "elders," "ministers," and "chancellors" directly as "the chief and deputy heads of the bandit stronghold."

1. Fiefdoms and the Qin System: From "Dividing the Spoils" to "Monopolizing the Loot" Before Qin Shi Huang unified China, the so-called "feudal decentralized society" was essentially the top robber chieftain engaging in a "division of power and spoils." Because transportation was inconvenient and information was backward at that time, the grand robber chieftain lacked the capability to rule such a vast territory alone. Therefore, he could only distribute the land and slaves to his subordinate lesser robbers (the vassal lords); everyone claimed their own territory and exploited the people together. But by the time of Qin Shi Huang, his ambition and appetite reached an absolute zenith. He invented the "Qin System" (Centralization), which swallowed the entire country, all its lands, and all its people completely into his own sole stomach, never delegating power downward again. This is the most central malignant tumor of China's two thousand years of history: to thoroughly exhaust the strength of all under heaven merely to serve the selfish desires of one man. This Qin system, which "turned the whole world into a private super-farm," has continued to exist to this day, changing the broth but not the medicine.

2. The Emperor's New Clothes: Modern Slavery Under the Guise of "Democracy" When the wheel of history rolled past the fall of the Qing Dynasty, the imperial signboard was smashed. The intellect of modern society began to awaken, and the rulers realized that the common people simply no longer believed in the old deceptive rhetoric of "sons and grandsons of dragons" and the "divine mandate of heaven." To deceive the public and to save this giant "bandit stronghold," they had to change their storefront and rearrange their props and backdrops. They noticed that the common people harbored a yearning for the "democracy" introduced from the West. So, without any hesitation, they stole the word "democracy," repackaged it, and slipped it over their "concealed advanced slavery." This is an absurd performance of "The Emperor's New Clothes." They blatantly invented a freakish term that couldn't even logically justify itself: the "People's Democratic Dictatorship." This is simply the biggest joke in the history of human language. They didn't even bother to fabricate a plausible lie, directly jamming "democracy" and "dictatorship"—two words as incompatible as fire and water—into the exact same sentence. "Democracy" is the anesthetic used to numb you, telling you "we are already a modern society"; while "dictatorship" is the dagger pressed against your ribs, meaning "the power of this country must be held by me." Why do they dare to leave such a massive logical loophole and still act as they please? Because the handle of the knife of violence is in their hands, and the right of interpretation belongs to them! Behind closed doors, how the law is defined, and whether ordinary people even count as "the people," is entirely up to them. Who dares not to cooperate? Who dares to raise an objection? At that solemn "National People's Congress," when a voice from the stage shouts, "Those opposed, please raise your hands," who dares to raise that hand? If you dare to raise your hand today, tomorrow you are a corrupt criminal, the day after you are soliciting prostitutes, and the day after that, you are guilty of inciting subversion of state power! Under this absolute violent deterrence, this modern bandit stronghold wearing fine suits has brazenly continued to exist to this day.

3. The Economic Black Box: Privately Dividing the Gold in the Name of the "Collective" Controlling bodies and minds is not enough. For this advanced slave system to keep running, it must squeeze out the very last drop of blood and sweat. Economically speaking, they used an unquestionable government decree, under the guise of "for your own good," and chanting loud slogans of "collective ownership" and "public ownership," to legally confiscate all resources on this earth—land, mountains, rivers, all minerals, tangible and intangible wealth—into their own pockets. They tell you this belongs to the "state," that it belongs to "everyone." But in reality, this is just a gigantic curtain. In front of the curtain are the common people, who empty six wallets (generations of family savings) just to buy an apartment, and who go bankrupt just to see a doctor; behind the curtain, however, is a bottomless "black box." These resources, which originally belonged to the whole people, generate astronomical amounts of profit every single day. But how this money is distributed and where it flows—the common people do not even have the right to glance at the ledger. Those modern robber chieftains cloaked as "public servants" hide within this black box, unscrupulously dividing up the gold that belongs to the entire population until there is nothing left. Who got how much, and whose family has stashed how much in overseas accounts, remains forever an unspeakable state secret. Robbers are still robbers, they just put on white gloves; slaves are still slaves, we are just stripped of the right to see our shackles.

Chapter 3: The Ultimate Harvesting of Advanced Slavery – Mortgages and State-Owned Enterprises

Ancient farm owners (emperors) exploited people very straightforwardly: He knew exactly how much grain you could harvest from your field each year, set a standard, and sent his bailiffs directly to collect the tax. That was outright robbery; whether it was a bit more or a bit less, the common people knew exactly what was happening.

But in today's authoritarian society, this logic of exploitation has undergone an extremely precise and extraordinarily cruel "advanced engineering." If ancient exploitation was an overt robbery with a knife, then today's exploitation is like inserting invisible tubes into you, not only sucking dry your current blood but also overdrawing your future life.

1. The Ultimate Robbery: Total Plunder Under the Guise of the "Collective" After the Communist Party took control of China, the first thing they did was complete the largest-scale robbery in human history. With just a single decree, they transferred all domestic natural resources—land, mountains, rivers, lakes, minerals, absolutely everything you can imagine—entirely into the pockets of the Communist Party. But they were too embarrassed to directly say, "This all belongs to me," so they invented a brilliant camouflage called "Collective Ownership." This rhetoric is incredibly hypocritical. Ultimately, whose ownership is this "collective ownership"? In reality, it is "Communist Party ownership." Through this sleight of hand, the ordinary common people, who were originally the masters of this land, were instantly stripped of everything and became "proletarians" in the truest sense of the word. Meanwhile, the rulers wielding the guns and the state machinery became the sole and largest slaveholders on this earth.

2. The Modern Indenture: Lifelong Captivity Through Real Estate As the industrial society swept the globe, China's rulers mimicked the West and went through the motions of running a modern economy. But what they truly learned was how to subject slavery to the most advanced "financialized packaging." The ultimate exploitation tool they invented is real estate.

How did they do it? First, absolute monopoly over land supply; second, absolute monopoly over the right to build houses. This means that even if you have your own land, without their approval, you cannot build a house to live in. "I say you are qualified, only then are you qualified; you cannot deem yourself qualified." After completely monopolizing this "rigid demand" commodity that everyone must possess, they began hoarding it, artificially and insanely driving up prices. When ordinary people stood powerless before astronomical, multi-million dollar property prices, they "kindly" opened a door: allowing you to borrow from the bank, advance your income for the next twenty or thirty years, and use unfinished or even non-existent pre-sale homes as collateral. You think you signed a sales contract with the developer and a loan agreement with the bank? Wrong! The developers and the banks are nothing more than two fingers inside the glove of the Communist elite interest group (the true slaveholders). That mortgage contract, which you must pay off for twenty or thirty years, is absolutely not a financial product; it is a modern version of a "Deed of Indenture" (Slave Contract)! The moment it is signed, the ordinary citizen has completely sold their labor and youth for the next twenty to thirty years to the slaveholder. You dare not get sick, you dare not quit your job, you dare not rebel; every day you open your eyes, you must work for this super-farm to pay off your debt. The iron chains are no longer fastened around your neck; they are fastened to your property deed.

3. The Invisible Vampires: State-Owned Enterprises Are Tax Bureaus This is not the end. In this advanced slave society, there are countless invisible mouths sucking your blood. Those behemoths crowned with the title of "State-Owned Enterprises"—handling electricity, water, telecommunications, and energy—are actually not enterprises at all. They are all tax bureaus and tax-collection agencies of the Communist Party. Because they control the essential means of survival upon which ordinary people depend. As long as you are alive, as long as you need to drink water, use electricity, make phone calls, or fuel your car, you can never bypass these monopolistic departments. Through monopolistic high prices that permit absolutely zero bargaining, they extort heavy levies from the common people in every single second of their daily lives. You think you are paying utility bills; in reality, you are paying an extremely crushing "survival tax."

4. The "Cruel Exploitation Rate" Concealed by Technology Many modern people fall under an illusion: We now have smartphones to play with, cars to drive, and we eat much better than people in ancient times. How can you say this is a slave society? This is exactly the most deceptive aspect of advanced slavery! The improvement in our living standards today is absolutely not because today's slaveholders are more benevolent than ancient emperors, but because the development of science and technology has massively improved production efficiency, causing the total output of society to grow exponentially! It's just that the overall pie has gotten bigger. But if you carefully do the math, you will discover a despair-inducing truth: The percentage of taxes you pay and the rate at which you are exploited today is absolutely no less than in ancient times; in fact, the exploitation is even more ruthless! In ancient times, after the slaveholder collected the imperial grain tax, you could keep the rest for yourself. But today's slaveholders, through high housing prices, high living costs, state monopolies, and inflation, squeeze almost all the wealth you create completely dry. After precise calculation, they still only leave you with "just enough rations to keep you alive so you can go back to work tomorrow." All the rest has been entirely surrendered to the slaveholders through various covert financial instruments. They operate more and more covertly, package it more and more modernly, leaving you exhausted running on the treadmill of heavy mortgages and exorbitant living costs, without even the energy to lift your head and catch a glimpse of the truth. This is the ultimate truth of China's contemporary advanced slave society: Technology has amplified wealth, but the system has solidified enslavement.

Chapter 4: The Blindfolded Mill Donkey and the Ugly Clay Sculpture – The Ultimate Strangling of Truth

We have clearly seen how advanced slavery treats people as "consumables" economically. But how can a ruling clique that commits every kind of evil and extorts ruthlessly still sit securely on this large farm for decades or even centuries?

Because they have mastered the ultimate dark magic for keeping slavery running: covering your mouth, blindfolding your eyes, and plugging your ears. In this system, the positioning of the common people is extremely clear: You are not a human being, you are not even as good as an old ox plowing the fields; your most fitting identity is that of a blindfolded donkey continuously turning a millstone in the dark.

1. Why Are You Not Allowed to Speak? Because Truth is Poison to Dictators Why do they forcefully clamp their hands over your mouth, refusing to let you cry out? Because as soon as you open your mouth, you will inevitably speak the facts. And for dictatorial rulers, everything they do is inhuman, everything they do is sucking the blood of the people at the bottom. The things they normally broadcast on the radio and in newspapers are all carefully packaged lies. When lies become the foundation of the state, even the simplest truth possesses the nuclear explosive power to subvert the regime. Therefore, they absolutely cannot allow the donkey at the mill to let out a single bray of pain. They not only want to gag your truth-telling mouth, but they also use massive loudspeakers to continuously broadcast their self-fabricated lies of a "golden age" twenty-four hours a day, forcing you to sing praises along with them.

2. The Ugly Clay Sculpture and the Exquisite Ceramic: The Fear of Comparison Why do they blindfold you, preventing you from seeing the road ahead? Why do they plug your ears, preventing you from hearing the sounds of the world? The ancients said: "Listening to both sides leads to enlightenment; listening to only one side leads to darkness." But what the dictator wants is precisely for you to "listen to only one side and believe it blindly." Because they know perfectly well how exceedingly inferior their level of governance and administrative standards are. If we compare national governance to a work of art, what the dictator has kneaded together is a pitted, incomparably hideous "inferior clay sculpture." But when you look at neighboring civilized countries, at most countries in the world that truly practice constitutionalism and the rule of law, their level of governance is like an "exquisite ceramic artwork."

The moment your horizons are opened, the moment you are given eyes to see the world and hear the true words of your neighbors, you will instantly generate a powerful "comparison." You will discover that in other countries, seeing a doctor is free for the citizens; that other people's mayors can be harshly scolded on television; that other people's houses come with permanent property rights! Once this "comparison" arises, the dictator's "ugly clay sculpture" can no longer fool anyone. To cover up their ugliness, their only solution is to drape the entire country in a giant black cloth.

3. Information Monopoly and "The Emperor's New Clothes" Therefore, whether it is the Chinese Communist Party or other authoritarian and totalitarian states in the world, the method they use to maintain their rule is always the same standard operation: absolute monopoly on information and dead-sealing the nation's borders. They have monopolized all news agencies, newspapers, television, and the internet. Every voice broadcast to the masses must be censored and issued by them. Even if in certain authoritarian countries it looks as if ordinary people can complain a bit online, as if there is a little right to "free speech," this is nothing but an illusion. In reality, these feeble voices are entirely under their extremely strict algorithmic surveillance and the control of internet police. The moment they cross the red line, they will immediately face account suspension, being "invited to tea" (police interrogation), or even imprisonment.

All these perverse regressions are, in the end, to provide cover for that group of liars strutting on the stage wearing "The Emperor's New Clothes." They are actually naked and unendurably ugly, but as long as they cover everyone's eyes and mouths, they can deceive themselves forever and enjoy the privileges of the farm owner.

Chapter 5: The Perfect Storm and the Death Spiral – Extinction-Level Exploitation and the Great Economic Collapse

When we tear off the false painted skin of the "economic miracle" and the "rise of a great power," and use the perspective of slavery to examine the economic operations under Communist rule over the past decades, we will discover: China's current economic decline is by no means a conventional cyclical crisis. Rather, it is a total collapse orchestrated firsthand by the totalitarian rulers, an inevitable outcome following "extinction-level extreme exploitation" inflicted upon the people at the bottom.

To squeeze the last drop of blood and sweat from this land, this massive totalitarian machine has constructed a multi-layered and lethal exploitation system.

1. The Unscrupulous "Conventional Monopoly Harvester" In this country, from water, electricity, and telecommunications to energy and transportation, these lifeline industries utilize absolute monopoly power to arbitrarily set prices, constituting the slaveholders' most fundamental, daily blood-sucking of the slaves.

2. The Accelerator of Extinction – The "Real Estate Indenture" If conventional monopolies are just a "steady trickle" of exploitation, then to extract massive wealth in the short term to maintain the operation of the totalitarian machine, the rulers have unleashed the most vicious leverage tool in human economic history—Chinese-style real estate. Housing is fundamentally the most basic rigid demand for human reproduction and survival, yet the totalitarian government holds an absolute monopoly over the land supply and the building permit system. After completely monopolizing this rigid-demand commodity, they artificially and frantically endowed it with extreme financial attributes, driving up housing prices. The bankruptcy of a large number of developers proves that they are nothing but the chamber pots of power; the vast majority of the massive profits have been entirely swallowed by the true landlord who monopolized the non-renewable land resources—the totalitarian government. When ordinary people are powerless against astronomical housing prices, they allow you to borrow from state-owned banks. China's state-owned banks are all the biological sons of the Communist Party, and also its core exploitation tools. That mortgage contract, which you need to pay off for twenty or thirty years, is absolutely not a financial product; it is a modern version of a "Deed of Indenture" (slave contract)! The moment it is signed, ordinary people have essentially offered their entire income and personal freedom for the next twenty to thirty years completely to this bank, to the slaveholder. This is a veritable, extinction-level extreme exploitation.

3. The Limit of the Bubble and the Arrival of the "Perfect Storm" For decades, all of China's so-called high GDP growth, the superficial prosperity of local governments, and those grandiose, overwhelming infrastructure constructions, have all been built upon the massive bubble foundation of "driving up real estate to exploit the common people." However, any physical exploitation has its limits. When the payment capability and overdraft capacity of the Chinese people are squeezed to the last drop of blood, the operation of things reaches its peak, and the turning point of history arrives with a bang. This hollow and inflated bubble, piled up by extracting the future, can no longer be pushed higher; it can only irretrievably burst. The collapse of real estate will inevitably, like dominoes, instantly trigger the explosion of bad bank loans, the default of massive local debts, and the complete shattering of the infrastructure bubble. In economics, this is the collapse of asset values, the "Minsky Moment" where the debts of a Ponzi scheme can absolutely no longer be covered up. All of this constitutes the most perfect economic storm in world history.

4. The Spiral Abyss: The Frog in Boiling Water Concealed by Dictatorship Faced with this unprecedented economic collapse, the totalitarian government's instinctive reaction is to deploy all machinery of violence and "stability maintenance," trying to cover the sky with one hand, tightly muffling the massive roar of the economic rupture. Therefore, on the surface, this collapse has not emitted a deafening roar, but this cannot in the slightest stop its destruction process on a physical level. Under the cover of news blackouts and fabricated data, the economy is presenting a spiraling downward death collapse, bit by bit, inch by inch, in a "boiling a frog in warm water" manner. What is even more despairing is that superimposed on this perfect storm of destruction is not only the "demographic cliff-like collapse" caused by long-term high-pressure exploitation (young people refusing to reproduce, refusing to provide new slaves), but also an incompetent and obstinate "Chief Accelerator." Every blind command and every political regression by this dictatorial ruler is frantically stepping on the gas pedal for this storm. All of this is a foregone conclusion; the Great Recession is inevitable, and it will continue to deteriorate until the entire totalitarian economic system completely collapses.

5. Economic Collapse Does Not Equal Regime Collapse: Calling for a New System However, the cruelty of history lies in this: economic collapse is only a necessary condition for a regime's downfall, not a sufficient condition. Dictators holding the barrel of a gun, even when the country's economy rots into a pool of mud, might still maintain their rule through extreme violence and blockades. When the Minsky Moment arrives, and the old machine is completely paralyzed, China will face the most dangerous vacuum period. What the common people need is not only to understand why they end up with nothing, but even more so, a "new system" capable of instantly replacing the old machine and truly snatching back wealth and power. Otherwise, when the old slaveholders fall, there will only be new tyrants stepping over the ruins to establish the next farm.

Part 2: The Reshaping —— The Consensus of Contract and Dividends

Chapter 6: The Physical Laws of Dictatorial Collapse and the "Premature Contract" to Break the Periodic Law

In Part 1, we have already diagnosed that this massive advanced slavery machine will inevitably become completely paralyzed due to the "economic death spiral." In this totalitarian society, the rulers simultaneously monopolize the invisible absolute power and the tangible absolute resources. These two are mutually causal, forming an extremely terrifying "upward double helix." But the underlying logic of philosophy and physics tells us: when things reach their extreme, they turn into their opposites. When the power of the exploiters is magnified beyond measure, and the survival space of the masses is compressed to the limit, this man-eating system is physically bound to face its collapse. Yet the cruelty of history lies in the fact that economic bankruptcy does not mean the dictator will voluntarily step down. How exactly will today's totalitarian machine draw its last breath?

1. The Three Historical Paths and Probabilities of Totalitarian Disintegration Flipping through the thousands of years of history regarding the fall of autocracies, the collapse of old regimes ultimately boils down to only three paths:

- Path One: Economic collapse triggers an uprising at the bottom (Probability: approx. 20%). When the masses face existential desperation, they rise up. But in a high-tech totalitarian society equipped with tanks, drones, and holographic surveillance, the probability of unarmed masses overthrowing the regime through pure "street uprisings" is infinitesimally small. Resistance at the bottom usually only serves as the "fuse" to ignite the powder keg, making it difficult to become the absolute force for a fatal blow.
- Path Two: Intervention by foreign forces or the backlash of foreign wars (Probability: approx. 30%). As the domestic economy completely enters a dead end, the dictator has a high probability of attempting to divert attention by inciting extreme nationalism, or even risking a foreign war (such as a Taiwan Strait crisis). But this is often the final step in digging their own graves; the combined counterattack of the modern civilized world will instantly destroy their fragile military and economic machine.
- Path Three: Infighting at the top and coups caused by uneven division of spoils (Probability: approx. 50%). A dictatorial clique is essentially a massive alliance for dividing the spoils. When the "Minsky Moment" arrives and the economic pie drastically shrinks, various factions will inevitably tear at each other to protect their lives and wealth. When the supreme dictator's insane directives enrage the entire bureaucratic and military interest group, a "palace coup" or "military insubordination and defection" becomes a high-probability event. Fortresses are often breached from within.

2. Puncturing the Illusion of the "Savior": Will Taiwan Take Over the Mainland? Speaking of foreign intervention, many desperate people on the mainland harbor an ultimate illusion in their hearts: If the CCP collapses in a Taiwan Strait war, will Taiwan's democratic armed forces counterattack and take over the mainland? This is an illusion from which one must be completely awakened. From the perspective of rational geopolitics, Taiwan's strategy has long since thoroughly shifted to a "purely defensive porcupine strategy." Their goal is to defend their democratic way of life from being annexed. Within the framework of realpolitik, Taiwan has neither the political will nor the administrative capacity to act as the "armed savior" for 1.4 billion people. Taiwan's true significance to the mainland is absolutely not military takeover, but the "proof of the lighthouse." It acts like a mirror, thoroughly shattering the dictator's shameless lie that "Chinese people are of low quality and unsuitable for democracy." It proves that people of the same culture and bloodline can absolutely build a clean, free, and constitutional society. True freedom can never rely on the charity of outsiders.

3. The Curse of the Periodic Law and Breaking Through via the "Premature Contract" Seeing through the paths of totalitarian collapse, we discover a more despairing reality: regardless of whether the old regime collapses through bottom-up uprisings or top-down coups, if the ordinary people do not hold a mature set of contracts in their hands, China will never escape the historical curse of "only changing the king, not the system"! Today you overthrow an emperor named Li, tomorrow he is replaced by a warlord named Zhao. The blood of the bottom class is drained, yet the ultimate result is still a new elite monopolizing resources, and the masses remain the donkeys at the mill. Our generation must absolutely no longer be such meaningless political consumables. To completely sever this two-thousand-year cycle when the next great collapse arrives, the only way out is: before the old machine takes its last breath, to proactively put forward "The Great Charter of Chinese Freedom" (Magna Carta) and "The Outline for the Implementation of the New Deal" in advance! Its core strategic significance lies in "preemptively capturing consensus." At the precise moment the old machine disintegrates and a power vacuum emerges, this "Magna Carta," which has already deeply rooted itself in people's hearts, will be the sole legitimate cornerstone for building the nation. We will hold this contract and tell anyone who attempts to seize power: "Times have changed! Any coup general or uprising leader who wishes to govern this country must immediately sign and strictly abide by this contract that returns power to the people. Otherwise, you are the common enemy of all citizens!" Using a preemptively established contract to bind future rulers is the only viable path we have forcefully hacked open amid the stormy waves of history.

Chapter 7: The Dimensional Elevation of Civilization – From Robber Logic to Equal Contract

After seeing through the bloodthirsty nature of China's two thousand years of "advanced slavery," in order to find a way out and formulate that "blueprint of the premature contract," we must cast our gaze upon the democratic and free societies around the globe. Here, we must shatter two superstitions: the official brainwashing of the "theory of Western democratic decline," and the blind worship of the "theory of Western democratic perfection."

1. The Background Color of History: All Crows Under Heaven Are Equally Black We must tear off a fig leaf: before entering modern civilization, Western feudal society and China's slave system had absolutely no difference in essence. The kings and lords of the Middle Ages were equally a group of robbers who controlled the machinery of violence, and the bottom masses were equally consumables on the farm. In the long, early dark night, all of humanity was wallowing in the mud of "robber logic."

2. The Magna Carta and Epoch-Making Elevation The watershed moment between Eastern and Western civilizations occurred in England in 1215. In that year, the "Magna Carta" was born. This document, for the first time, forced the high-and-mighty king (the grand robber chieftain) to the negotiating table, compelling him to admit: even a king cannot arbitrarily deprive people of their private property and lives; the collection of taxes must be agreed upon by those being taxed. From this moment on, humanity's political system underwent an

"epoch-making dimensional elevation." It ushered humanity from "pure violent crushing" into a new era of "freedom, democracy, and constitutionalism."

3. The Flaws of Democracy and the Crushing Advantage of Dimensions Are today's Western democratic societies perfect? Absolutely not. They equally suffer from issues like partisan attrition and capital interference. However, compared to the evil of dictatorial regimes, this imperfection is not on the same dimensional level at all! It is like a modern airplane that occasionally breaks down, compared to a primitive horse-drawn carriage pulled by slaves who are whipped at any moment. The airplane, no matter its flaws, is flying in the three-dimensional sky; the carriage, no matter how smoothly it rides, will forever crawl in the mud pit.

4. The Duel of Underlying Logics: The Packaged Robber VS. Equal Negotiation The fundamental difference between slavery and democracy is extremely simple. The underlying foundation of slavery is the "logic of robbers and bandits." The ruler has learned to package himself with the "big picture," but he is always the commander, and you are always the obeyer and the tool to be extracted; you have absolutely no right to refuse. The underlying logic of democratic society, however, is: all people are born equal. The democratic system uses the cage of the constitution and the ballot to tightly suppress human greed. When the government wants to take money from your pocket, it cannot pull out a gun directly; it must engage in equal dialogue and negotiation with you under the watchful eyes of the entire society. One is a slave kneeling to listen to the master's commands; the other is a negotiation standing up to bargain with the other party. The reason we are drafting "The Great Charter of Chinese Freedom" today is precisely to firmly nail that group of modern robbers, who have stolen the nation's wealth, to this negotiating table to negotiate, or to kick them right off the table!

Chapter 8: The Blueprint for Breakthrough – The "Magna Carta" and the "New Deal" as the Founding Contract

When the "perfect storm" of economic collapse completely shreds the old machine, the lies and high walls will vanish into thin air. But on the ruins of the old system's collapse, we must absolutely not fall into the abyss of warlord conflicts, let alone blindly wait for the next self-proclaimed "great savior" to take over everything. History has long proven that waiting for a savior often ends in welcoming a new slaveholder. To thoroughly sever this destiny of the cyclical loop of order and chaos, we must, before the old machine is completely paralyzed and before a new regime is established, have the 1.4 billion Chinese people themselves draw a clear blueprint for the future nation in advance and lay down insurmountable rules. The following two documents—"The Great Charter of Chinese Freedom" and "The Outline for the Implementation of the New Deal"—are exactly such a nation-building blueprint belonging to the 1.4 billion Chinese people. They are not high-handed directives, but a founding contract that must be agreed upon in advance by all compatriots through co-signing. When the consensus of millions converges here, the cornerstone of the new nation is already firmly laid in our hearts.

1. The Essence of Power: The Surrender of Private Rights and Anytime Recall The "Magna Carta" reaffirms the most common-sense and greatest truth in human constitutional history: all power in this country inherently and absolutely belongs to all of us, the people. The future governors of the state, whether the president or officials at all levels, do not possess any sacred halo or privileges themselves. The only reason they hold power is because all of us have reached a consensus and collectively surrendered a portion of our private rights to them temporarily, commissioning them as "temporary agents" to manage this shared country on our behalf. Since power is surrendered by us, we possess the absolute right of revocation. If, during their governance, these agents are incompetent, or even dare to use public power for misdeeds and rent-seeking, we, as the true masters of power, have the right and the confidence at any time to initiate recall procedures and immediately force them to step down. This is the "ultimate iron cage" and the Sword of Damocles tailor-made by the "Magna Carta" for all those in power.

2. The Boundaries of Wealth: Equally Dividing Heaven's Gifts, Absolutely Protecting Private Property The "New Deal" must draw an extremely strict property boundary in economics. We must clarify a core bottom line to everyone: The "New Deal's" proposal to evenly distribute wealth is absolutely not the historical "robbing the rich to feed the poor," nor is it the plundering of anyone's private property! The first category is the wealth you earned through personal invention, business operation, and hard work. The "Magna Carta" solemnly declares: private property is forever sacred and inviolable! Every cent exchanged for your sweat is forever under the absolute protection of the law. The second category is the so-called "inherent property rights" (natural rights to wealth)—the vast lands, minerals, and state monopoly dividends based on natural resources. These nurturings of nature rightfully belong to every single person on this land, and should absolutely not be privately monopolized by any totalitarian government or elite! What the "New Deal" will do is snatch back this portion of "Heaven's gifts" and distribute them absolutely evenly to every Chinese citizen. What we divide equally are the gifts of Heaven; what we protect is personal striving!

3. The Iron Law: Inherent Property Rights Cannot Be Traded, Only Inherited For this survival property right bestowed upon you by Heaven, you only have the unconditional right to "receive" and "enjoy" it, but absolutely no right to "trade and transfer." This is to completely block the possibility of a new round of slavery restoration. If this baseline property right were allowed to be bought and sold, capital giants would inevitably take advantage of people's vulnerabilities to acquire the "survival baselines" of ordinary people at extremely low prices. Therefore, this inherent property right gifted by nature is bound to your citizenship for life. You cannot sell it for cash; it forever and irrevocably provides you with the absolute baseline guarantee for survival.

4. The Ultimate Obligation of the State: The Dignity Baseline and the Fraternity of Compatriots The state should and must assume the most foundational responsibility: guaranteeing that every citizen has a decent, dignified life. The "New Deal" solemnly promises that the state must provide three unconditional baseline guarantees: universal free healthcare, free education, and guaranteed dignified eldercare. We absolutely will not allow any ordinary person in this new country to fall back into poverty due to illness. The 1.4 billion compatriots are all brothers and sisters; when our brothers and sisters temporarily fall into existential despair, we have the obligation to lend a helping hand. This is not only the statutory responsibility of the state machine but also the fraternal contract we as citizens pledge to each other based on the most fundamental human empathy.

5. The Defense Line to End Centralization: Federalism China has a vast territory. If the new regime remains a "Qin System of grand unification where the central government controls everything," then even with elections, the extreme concentration of resources will inevitably spawn a new super-centralization. The "Great Charter of Chinese Freedom" completely breaks this two-thousand-year curse, establishing the iron law of "local self-governance" under federalism. In the future China, the power of the central government will be strictly limited to extremely narrow fields such as national defense and diplomacy. All provinces, cities, and counties will have a high degree of autonomy—the vast majority of local taxes will remain local to benefit local residents, and local chief executives must be authentically elected by local residents, rather than parachuted in from the center. Only by thoroughly decentralizing power and wealth to the various provinces and municipalities can a super-dictator be forever prevented from once again gathering the nation's resources to enslave the people.

Chapter 9: The Natural Enemy of Power – Freedom of Speech and the Return of Authority to the People

1. The Arrogance of Power and Public Opinion Monopoly: Why is "Freedom of Speech" Alone Ineffective? We must first puncture a naive political illusion—the belief that relying solely on "freedom of speech" can overthrow corruption. Examining totalitarian societies, the ruling clique has taken all the military, judiciary, and media into its own hands. Taking a step back, even if the public exposes the evidence of a high official's corruption or abuse of power to the world, will those heavily empowered officials resign in disgrace? Absolutely not. Faced with public opinion that lacks substantive constraint, rulers possessing absolute violence will only display extreme arrogance and contempt. What is even more absurd and contrary to modern political ethics is that the totalitarian system not only blocks criticism, but openly uses citizens' tax money to support a large number of court writers to fabricate its legitimacy, and even long maintains sub-organizations like "art and cultural troupes" within vital national instruments such as the military. Those performers, who should have survived on their own merit in the commercial market, forcibly whitewash a reality riddled with wounds into a flourishing era of peace on stage, purely in exchange for privileges within the system; the rulers even arbitrarily bestow sacred military ranks and senior general treatment upon these tools solely responsible for singing praises. This act of treating public state apparatuses as entertainment is the totalitarian ruler openly declaring the rot and arrogance of their power to the entire society. This is the most cruel underlying logic of politics: if the sword of sanction is not in hand, the public's freedom of speech, in the face of a fully armed totalitarianism that monopolizes the discourse, is nothing but a helpless sigh without any substantive binding force.

2. Election, Recall, and Common Law: The "Three Cornerstones" for Completely Returning Authority to the People If we want freedom of speech to truly erupt with devastating efficacy, we must snatch the country's laws and machinery of violence back from the hands of the extremely small privileged class and hold them firmly in the hands of the vast majority of ordinary people! The "New Deal" completely returns state authority to the ordinary people by establishing the following "Three Institutional Cornerstones":

- Cornerstone One: The Right to Authentic Elections (Temporary Transfer of Power). The administrative heads and representatives at all levels of the state must be genuinely elected by every ordinary citizen through "one person, one vote." This proclaims that the sole legitimate source of power is bottom-up authorization.
- Cornerstone Two: The Right of Recall at Any Time (The Ultimate Deterrence of Power). An election by no means implies writing a "blank check" for several years to politicians. As long as officials are duplicitous or act recklessly, the public does not need to wait for the next term; they can recall them at any time through legal procedures.

- Cornerstone Three: The Common Law System and the Civilian Jury (The Ultimate Judgment of Power). After evils are exposed, they are no longer judged by "bureaucratic judges" eating from the government's rice bowl. Judges are demoted to "referees who interpret the law," while the power of life and death is completely handed over to a jury randomly composed of ordinary citizens.

3. The Closed Loop of Freedom of Speech and Common Law When election rights, recall rights, and the common law system are established, freedom of speech and the press are no longer helpless sighs. Together they form an indestructible closed loop of the rule of law: The news media and the freely speaking internet are the "searchlights" completely independent of government interference, responsible for thoroughly exposing the sins in the dark; authentic elections and the right of recall at any time are the "dismissal notices" in the hands of the people, responsible for stripping wrongdoers of their political power at any time; and the civilian jury under the common law system is the "ultimate bench of judgment" of justice, completely returning power to the people, that is, the ordinary person.

4. The Upgrade of Common Law: The "On-Site & Cloud" Dual-Track Jury To push the mechanism of preventing power interference to the extreme, the "New Deal" carries out a major upgrade in the history of human justice—establishing the "On-Site 12-Person + Large-Scale Online Random" Dual-Track Jury System. In the courtrooms of major public cases in the future, besides the 12 civilian jurors on site, the system will randomly select thousands or tens of thousands of "online jurors" from among legally eligible citizens nationwide who apply voluntarily. They will synchronously watch the trial through an encrypted network and make an independent verdict. A corrupt politician could easily bribe a government judge under the totalitarian system; but now, it is absolutely impossible for him to bribe the on-site civilians at the moment the trial opens, and it is even more impossibly unlikely for him to bribe the massive, completely anonymous online jurors scattered across the country! At the moment the public is randomly selected for the bench of judgment, they represent the natural justice of the majority of this country; no strong power can overturn this verdict.

The Ultimate Closed Loop of Discovering and Solving Problems If a society only has freedom of speech and the press, but lacks legal fairness and the return of authority, then at best you have only "discovered the problem," but have absolutely no ability to "solve the problem." You can only watch the evil dragon commit evil; aside from a lament, there is no other way. However, when we truly possess authentic election and recall rights, when we have a neutral military and a common law system led by the people, we not only possess the eyes to discover problems, but have completely grasped "all the means to solve the problem"! Only when the freedom to discover problems is perfectly combined with the ability to solve them can a nation that has experienced two thousand years of cycles return fairness and justice, without reservation, to every single individual.

Chapter 10: Democratic Restructuring in the Tech Era – Eliminating the Representational Loss of the Horse-and-Buggy Era

Since the modern democratic system is a civilization dimension higher, can we just directly copy the blueprints from the West from two hundred years ago and use them as a panacea to save China? The answer is: we cannot simply copy them. When we hold the magnifying glass of political science and use real data to examine those traditional democratic systems in the world that have been running for hundreds of years, we will find that these systems, born in the "horse-and-buggy era," have inevitably exposed some unavoidable systemic limitations in today's information age. If traditional democracy is not upgraded at the fundamental level in combination with modern technology, it will similarly face severe representational loss from elite agents.

1. The Infinite Loop of Deception in Traditional Representative Systems In traditional presidential or parliamentary systems, although they flaunt democracy, reality reveals a fatal pain point: the betrayal of campaign promises and the severe lag in correction mechanisms. To garner votes, politicians often speak nonsense and make arbitrary promises before elections. However, once they hold great power, the policies they implement after taking office are completely contrary to their promises, or even deeply tied to capital conglomerates. At this time, the public finds that the ballots in their hands are of no help whatsoever; the only thing they can do is helplessly endure the long four or five-year term. What is even more despairing is that when you have endured this term's fraudster, the next time you elect another person, you still do not have any mechanism to guarantee they won't deceive you again. The common people have actually fallen into an infinite loop of being "forever alternatively deceived." During this long "window for doing evil," power continues to operate arrogantly, and the public can only swallow their anger. Furthermore, in the multi-party compromises of the parliamentary system, the final policies enacted are often neither Party A's original intent nor Party B's promise, but a "diluted patchwork" that seriously violates the voters' will.

2. The Democratic Elevation in the Tech Era: Granting the "Emergency Brake Right" We must objectively admit that this traditional "representative democracy" was born hundreds of years ago. In an era when it took weeks for commoners riding horses to deliver ballots, electing a "representative" to go to a meeting was a magnificent innovation. But today, in the era of a technological explosion characterized by artificial intelligence and instantaneous communication, if we still let a few politicians hide in back rooms making decisions for hundreds of millions of people, it would be a massive waste of modern technology. When exploring the restructuring of a new type of democracy, we must face a reality: we do not need 1.4 billion people to vote every day on which highway to build or what specific emission standards to set; daily administration is still left to the civil service system. However, the new type of democracy must grant ordinary citizens an absolute power where no middleman profits from the spread—the direct "emergency brake right" to say "no"! True democracy does not require every passenger to rush forward and seize the steering wheel of the great vehicle of the state; rather, it grants every passenger in the vehicle the "right of direct recall" under their seat, achievable in one step. You do not need to know how to drive the engine. But when the politician holding the steering wheel attempts to drive the vehicle off a cliff, or when the bureaucracy attempts to embezzle your wealth in a black box, the public has the confidence to press the button at any time and instantly strip them of their power.

3. The Fair Contract in the Sunlight Since we do not require the common people to replace officials in driving, how should we drive these politicians? The answer is: completely discard the moral hypocrisy of "selfless dedication," and establish a set of "absolutely transparent employment and fair contracts." The essence of democratic elections is the public contract signed between the public and the politicians. As long as politicians take away high legitimate returns openly and aboveboard in the sunlight, under the real-time monitoring of all citizens' accounts, relying on real political achievements, the public will applaud them. We never oppose officials obtaining high legitimate interests. However, the other side of the contract is absolutely ruthless. If your hand dares to reach into the black box, dares to engage in rent-seeking or corruption—the searchlights of the free media and the public's right of recall will instantly make you lose everything, confiscate all your property, and subject you to severe trials. Between the absolute transparency of high rewards and severe punishment, the only ones left behind can be the public servants of the state who truly revere the contract.

Chapter 11: Shredding the Arrogance of Pseudo-Elites – The Ultimate Dissection of the Three "Threats of Chaos"

When we present the "Magna Carta" and the "New Deal" to the world, the first to jump out and oppose them will absolutely not be the ordinary toiling masses, but those "pseudo-elites" and vested interest classes who have long monopolized the discourse. To maintain their privilege of "standing high above and making decisions for you," they will desperately instill fear into the public, bring out the most obscure academic jargon, and throw out three extremely vicious "threats of chaos."

1. Dismantling the Threat of "Mob Rule": Rational Mathematical Shackles, Secondary Confirmation, and "Absolute Veto" The first threat from the elites is: if the common people are granted the power to recall officials at any time, society will fall into the irrational "tyranny of the majority" and "mob rule." This is an arrogant lie that treats the masses as ignorant! In the design of the New Deal, the decentralization of power is by no means a reckless opening of the floodgates, but is equipped with extremely strict "dual rational thresholds" and a thunderous "absolute red line":

- Threshold One: The extremely harsh absolute mathematical baseline. To initiate a nationwide recall, it must reach the absolute approval of "more than 50% of ALL citizens holding voting rights." Note, it is not over half of the people who voted, but "absolute over half of the entire society." In reality, to get more than half of the nation's citizens to lay down their work to jointly recall a person, unless this person has truly committed heinous crimes that even common sense cannot tolerate, it is fundamentally impossible to trigger. This fundamentally eradicates the possibility of a small number of extremists instigating trouble.
- The Absolute Red Line: The 66.7% "Direct Recall" killer move. In this mechanism, there is an insurmountable iron law of public will: if in the first national vote, the proportion in favor of recall directly triggers the extremely high absolute majority threshold of 66.7% (two-thirds), this means that the official's conduct has completely pierced the society's bottom line, provoking an indisputable absolute consensus. Faced with this overwhelming public will, the system will no longer grant any second chance or cooling-off period; the official will be immediately and completely recalled from office!
- Threshold Two: A three-month "Cooling-Off Period" and Secondary

Confirmation. If the first round of recall voting crosses the 50% warning line but does not reach the 66.7% absolute majority, the system will only trigger a "yellow warning card" and forcefully enter a three-month "cooling-off period." The shelf life of human emotion is very short; this is the coolant that allows truth to ferment. Three months later, the whole nation conducts a second round of voting. If the emotions have completely cooled, yet there is still more than half of the nation resolutely wanting him to step down, this is absolutely not some "impulse of a rabble," but an irresistible rational public will!

Facts have long proven that when the citizens of a country possess equal wealth distribution and fair treatment, mobs are forced out by tyranny; whereas citizens who possess real money and contractual guarantees are the most rational bedrock in the world.

2. Dismantling the Threat of "Hyperinflation": The Transfer of Wealth Rather Than Money Printing The second threat from the elites is: dividing the state-owned monopoly profits equally as a "survival dividend" to the whole nation is engaging in Latin American-style populist suicide, which will trigger hyperinflation and cause the national economy to collapse completely. This rhetoric deliberately confuses the difference between "unanchored money printing" and "profit dividends." How does hyperinflation come about? It happens when a dictatorial government, to fill deficits, turns on the printing presses to print out waste paper backed by nothing real. But the money given to the common people in the "New Deal" is not money printed out of thin air; it is the "true profits" that those monopolistic state-owned enterprises and the privileged class originally earned and withheld! Land, mountains, rivers, and minerals are inherently free gifts from nature and Heaven to all new lives on this land. Dividing the revenues of these resources among all people is essentially conducting an "absolutely fair transfer of purchasing power." The total pool of funds in society has not increased by a single cent; it is just that this real wealth, previously withheld and squandered by a few, is now transferred horizontally into the bank cards of 1.4 billion ordinary people. Returning the common people's own money to the common people is entirely justified! This is absolutely no poison of inflation, but the right path to achieve the baseline guarantee.

3. Dismantling the Threat of "Rule by the Legally Illiterate": The Paradox of Interests and the Return of Common Sense The third threat from the elites is the most deceptive: they claim that the judiciary must be monopolized by professional elites; if ordinary masses act as judges (in a civilian jury), the law will cease to exist. This not only demonstrates ignorance of the common law system but also overlooks the great bedrock of human nature: the absolute paradox of interests. In the logic of common law, once a verdict is formed, it becomes an "absolute precedent" that everyone must obey. If the public today deprives a person of their property or life without evidence due to momentary emotion, they are establishing a precedent for this country that "property and life can be casually deprived." The common people are absolutely not stupid; who would be crazy enough to establish a rule that could hang themselves or deprive their descendants of their interests tomorrow? This is exactly why the masses, when holding judicial discretionary power, will not only refrain from acting recklessly, but will be far more cautious than any so-called elite. Because protecting the legitimate rights of that stranger is protecting the masses' own avenue of retreat. Letting the common sense of the masses return to the courtroom is the thorough liquidation of elite judicial privileges.

Part 3: The Future —— The Shore of Civilization and the Return of Humanity

Chapter 12: The Iron Law of History and the Last Gasp Behind High Walls

When we stretch the yardstick of time and look down upon history from the pinnacle of human civilization's evolution, we will discover an extremely cold, yet extremely fair iron law: History is pushed forward by the entire world, and its direction is absolutely predestined. Any careerist, any interest group, attempting to reverse the wheel of history is ultimately like a mantis trying to stop a chariot.

1. The Increasingly Narrow Survival Space of Dictators and Their Inner Fear Looking around the globe, the survival space for dictatorial regimes and authoritarian states has become increasingly narrow. Under the revealing mirror of universal values—freedom, democracy, constitutionalism, equality, and human rights—dictatorial regimes have become increasingly isolated on a global scale.

Many people believe that totalitarian rulers are extremely powerful and confident. The reality is exactly the opposite. If they were truly as "great, glorious, and correct" as they propagandize themselves to be, why must they erect a towering internet firewall within their own country? Why must they strictly control the dissemination of information?

The answer is simple: Because those inside the system know better than anyone else the direction of history's ultimate choice! They know that their rhetoric collapses at the first blow in the face of truth. All the blockades and information controls implemented today are fundamentally not for any simple "national security," but the "last gasp" of vested interest groups unwilling to relinquish their absolute power and massive interests in the face of the irreversible tide of history.

2. Our Original Intention: Sowing the Seeds of Consensus in Advance in the Dark Night

However, no matter how long the dark night is, it cannot stop the arrival of dawn. At this critical point in history, we face an unprecedented responsibility.

If we wait until the day the old system comes crashing down for the common people to awaken from their dreams and seek a way out, society will inevitably plunge into massive turmoil and bloodshed. But what if, today, we can write the ideals of universal values into "The Great Charter of Chinese Freedom"? What if we can let the people on this land understand the truth in advance and form an indestructible consensus in their hearts?

When the earth-shattering transformation of society happens sooner or later, as long as the consensus of "the will of the people" is already formed, the cancerous tumor of autocracy will absolutely never grow again on the ruins of the fallen old machine. This is our original intention in writing this work: to avoid senseless social turmoil, to end the historical cycle of dynastic changes, and to use the consensus of the contract to escort this deeply suffering nation safely to the shore of civilization.

Chapter 13: The Ultimate Mission of Civilization – The Iron Law of the Survival Baseline and the Vision of Great Harmony

When we talk about the future of China and the world, what we face is not only the reshaping of the political system, but an unprecedented massive transformation that the entire human civilization is about to usher in—the comprehensive arrival of the Artificial Intelligence (AI) era. This is not only a technological leap, but the ultimate test of the fundamental functions of a state.

1. The Giant Wave of the Era: The Survival Baseline is the "Historical Mission" of the State

Faced with the reality of AI comprehensively replacing human mental and physical labor, a modern civilized state must fulfill its fundamental task: unconditionally guaranteeing the survival baseline of every citizen.

We must explain clearly to the masses: This is absolutely not a government handout. Guaranteeing the survival baseline is the historical mission that the new regime must undertake. If a country is unable to protect its citizens from hunger and despair, then this state machine loses the legitimacy of its existence.

2. Rejecting the "Ten-Yuan" Scam: The Concrete Estimation of the Survival Dividend The greatest worry of the common people is: "It sounds nice, but when the time comes and you only distribute ten or eight yuan a month, what kind of guarantee is that?"

Here, we must provide a clear, dignity-anchored numerical estimation. The new regime promises that the "survival dividend" received by every citizen will consist of two parts, ensuring its true purchasing power:

- Baseline Anchoring: The dividend distributed monthly shall never be lower than 1.5 times the minimum cost of maintaining a decent life locally. This means that no matter where you are, this dividend must guarantee that you not only have enough to eat and wear, but can also afford rent, pay for internet, and participate in social life with dignity.
- Resource Dividend: The nurturings of nature rightfully belong to every single person on this land, and should absolutely not be privately monopolized by any totalitarian government or elite! According to our calculations, by taking the national land transfer revenues, mineral resource revenues, and the total annual profits of monopolistic state-owned enterprises—which are currently intercepted by the privileged class—and distributing them directly and evenly among the 1.4 billion people through the "National Survival Fund," every Chinese family (taking a family of three as an example) is expected to receive a direct cash dividend of 50,000 to 100,000 RMB annually.

This money is not waste paper printed from a machine; it is the gold snatched back from the black boxes of those "grand robber chieftains," which originally belonged to you in the first place.

3. Backed by Strength: How Can We Accomplish This? Many people will ask: "Where does the money come from?" We want to give all citizens a pill of reassurance; our financial strength comes from three unshakable sources:

- Reclaiming "Natural Resources": Over the past few decades, hundreds of trillions in land transfer fees and mineral revenues generated by this land have been illegally misappropriated. The New Deal will thoroughly reclaim these "Heaven's gifts" and use all their interest and returns for the universal dividend.
- Liquidating the "Monopoly Black Box": Those monopolistic behemoths, named "state-owned" but actually "domestic slaves," will have their hundreds of trillions of accumulated assets comprehensively liquidated and converted into the universal equity of all people.
- Levying the "Tech Computing Power Tax": In the AI era, we will levy a reasonable "robot tax" on automated production and cutting-edge computing power. When machines replace humans in labor, the surplus value created by machines will no longer flow solely to capitalists, but will flow into the universal accounts of the people.

4. Eliminating Fear: Moving Toward the Shore of Great Harmony When this "survival baseline" is firmly secured by the rule of law and financial strength, the development of technology will no longer be a nightmare for ordinary people, but a gospel for all of humanity. Capable entrepreneurs are free to innovate and become wealthy, because the problem of the survival baseline for the entire society has been solved under the premise of fairness, rationality, and without plundering others. By that time, no matter how AI technology disrupts industries, its impact on the bottom of society will be completely absorbed by the system's safety net.

If we build society according to the model of "The Great Charter of Chinese Freedom," on the day it operates maturely, humanity will truly move toward that ultimate shore anticipated by ancient philosophers for thousands of years—All under heaven belongs to the public; the world is a Great Harmony.

Final Chapter: The Dragon Breaking Its Chains – The World Coordinate of a Free China and the Ultimate Outlook

When we ruthlessly tear off the painted skin of two thousand years of "advanced slavery" in this book, and use "The Great Charter of Chinese Freedom" and "The Outline for the Implementation of the New Deal" to smash these invisible shackles, many people might ask: When this new system—which thoroughly returns power to the people and fairly distributes wealth to the masses—is truly implemented and operational, what kind of society will the future China become?

Here, based on the strictest economic logic, political common sense, and the dimensional crushing power of modern technology, we can present an absolutely suspense-free ultimate outlook to our 1.4 billion compatriots, and to the world.

1. The Breakthrough of Ideas: A Hundred Schools of Thought Contending and the Comprehensive Freedom of Spirit and Body When the common law system defends absolute fairness, and freedom of the press and speech disperses the black box of power, the first and greatest chemical reaction will occur in Chinese society: the thorough dissipation of fear and the liberation of the soul.

For two thousand years, the most vicious method of the totalitarian system has been to lock 1.4 billion brains into the same cage. But under the sunlight of the New Deal, we will usher in a true era of "letting a hundred flowers bloom and a hundred schools of thought contend"! In this free country, there will no longer be "banned books," no longer a high-and-mighty "Ministry of Truth." What kind of lifestyle you want to live, where you want to migrate, is all entirely up to you. The 1.4 billion vivid souls will erupt with unprecedented vitality and creativity. The future China will bid a complete farewell to that lifeless "standardized processing factory" and become a boiling ocean of colliding ideas and extreme cultural prosperity.

2. Minimalist Government and AI Transformation: Severing Rent-Seeking for Ultimate Integrity Accompanying the liberation of minds, the New Deal will conduct an unprecedented "physical-level slimming down" of the national governance system—comprehensively introducing AI to build an extremely compressed "minimalist government."

In the old machine of the past, the bureaucratic system, to prove its own existence and create rent-seeking space, deliberately invented countless cumbersome approvals and certificates.

They fed tens of millions of "redundant personnel" who created no value, alongside a massive "stability maintenance machine," madly consuming vast amounts of tax revenue every day.
The underlying purpose of the "New Deal" is extremely cold and clear: use technology directly to eradicate the physical soil of corruption! The new regime will hand over the vast majority of administrative approvals and resource audits to open-source, transparent AI algorithms. AI has no selfish desires and accepts no bribes. The pure administrative costs of the new state and the frictional costs of the entire society will experience a cliff-like plunge, dropping directly to one percent (1%) of the old era! This not only brings thrilling efficiency, but the trillions in massive tax revenues saved will be injected losslessly into genuine livelihood dividends.

3. The Re-slicing of Wealth: Independent Labor Unions, Middle-Classification of the Bottom, and Detonating Super Domestic Demand When the extremely heavy costs of stability maintenance and bureaucratic friction are completely wiped out, the New Deal will deploy its core weapon in the field of wealth distribution—establishing genuine independent labor unions and significantly raising the minimum wage standard.
Under the old "advanced slavery," ordinary people were stripped of their bargaining power and reduced to consumables in sweatshops. The emergence of independent labor unions gives laborers the backbone to clash head-on with capital and the government at the negotiating table. Its ultimate goal is to universally and irreversibly elevate the income of all ordinary people at the bottom to a middle-class level!
This is not at all inflation caused by over-issuing currency, but an "absolutely fair re-slicing" of the social wealth pie! In the past, the totalitarian government and crony capitalists acted as "slaveholders" to siphon off massive profits. Now, the policies of independent labor unions and a minimalist government are to snatch back the swallowed profits and return them to the ordinary people.
This not only brings dignity but instantly spawns the largest and most robust super-consumer group in the entire history of humanity. When one billion people at the bottom dare to consume and are able to consume, this massive domestic demand will force Chinese enterprises to bid farewell to the model of squeezing the bottom, compelling them to comprehensively upgrade toward high-tech and high value-added sectors, realizing a truly healthy and enduring internal economic circulation.

4. The True Soaring of the Dragon: The Convergence of Six Divine Artifacts and the Dimensional Strike of the "Miracle Decade" When the common law system and authentic elections and recalls bring absolute fairness and justice; when the three major dividends of healthcare, education, and eldercare unconditionally catch the survival baseline; when the AI minimalist government clears social frictional costs to zero; when independent labor unions re-slice wealth for the bottom masses; coupled with the thorough liberation of ideas and spirit—the combined effect of these six major policies will bring China an unprecedented qualitative leap and an overall elevation in civilizational dimensions!
The explosive power of this economic and social soaring will be extremely astonishing. In the first 5 to 10 years following the implementation of the "New Deal," China will usher in the most spectacular "Miracle Decade" in human history. In these 5 to 10 years, although it will still take time to catch up with old powerhouse nations in absolute per capita GDP statistics, because the bone-sucking exploitation of the old system has been completely severed and wealth flows directly back to the private sector, the "civilizational dimension" of Chinese society and the "true life happiness" of ordinary people will instantly reach or even surpass the experience of developed countries! In an extremely short time, China will leap from an oppressive sweatshop into a wealthy, free, and world-class, top-tier civilized society.

Immediately following this, driven by the frenzy of a healthy internal circulation, the physical dimensional strike power of the population multiplier will reveal its true might: China's population base is about four times that of the United States. Driven by a minimalist, free constitutional system and super domestic demand, we only need to achieve one-third to one-half of the production efficiency of Americans, and China's overall economic scale will, without any suspense, reach 1.5 to 2 times that of the United States within 20 to 30 years!

This is not painting a pie in the sky; this is the inevitable outcome firmly locked in by fair distribution and economic common sense. The future China will gloriously transform from a "systemic threat" that the free world guards against everywhere, into the strongest cornerstone defending global modern civilization and the world's hegemon of domestic demand.

Conclusion: This Golden Age Shall Be As You Wish

The two thousand years of dark night have been long enough. Today, the death knell for totalitarianism has sounded, and that old meat grinder is accelerating its collapse in the death spiral of its own making.

When all our compatriots sign this "Great Charter of Chinese Freedom" on the eve of dawn, when we personally snatch back the state's machinery of violence and distribute the wealth that belongs to us—that new China with no emperor, no privileged redundant personnel, no fear, possessing only absolute fairness, minimalist efficiency, a hundred flowers blooming, and dignity, will inevitably rise from these ancient ruins.

It will inevitably become the freest, most incorruptible, and most prosperous country in the world; it will inevitably become the greatest lighthouse for all humanity moving toward "Great Harmony" in the tech era!

All of this merely awaits our awakening; all of this merely awaits our joint carving of that uncompromising contract.

[Attachment] The Truth of the National Abacus — Without increasing a single cent of tax, how do we fulfill the welfare bottom line for 1.4 billion people?

When we promise to all citizens that the future Chinese Federation will implement "universal free healthcare, universal basic pension, twelve-year free education", and distribute national natural revenues as a "survival dividend", people who have been brainwashed by the old system for a long time will always exclaim: "Where does the money come from? Isn't this killing the chicken to get the eggs, a Latin American-style populism that will bankrupt the country?"

The people who raise this kind of doubt do so because they have never seen the real national ledger. They simply do not know how astonishing the wealth created by the Chinese common people is, and even less do they know how bottomless the "man-eating black hole" of that old system is.

Today, we will use the public data published by the CCP's National Bureau of Statistics and Ministry of Finance themselves to conduct an extremely cold and professional financial sandbox deduction. We want to prove to the 1.4 billion citizens: As long as we cut off the blood-sucking tubes of the old system and establish the modern financial dual-track system of "physical isolation between the national treasury and the universal fund", we can not only afford this money, but also leave a perpetual treasury for our descendants.

I. The bottom ledger of expenditure: The three major livelihood bottom lines, how much money needs to be spent exactly? Before calculating income, let us first calculate the account of rigid national expenditures to death. To let 1.4 billion people live with dignity, exactly how much real gold and silver is needed every year?

1. The absolute safety net of healthcare and education (An annual increase of about 4 trillion)

Universal free healthcare: To fill the gap of "personal health expenditure" that ordinary people currently pay out of their own pockets, an annual increase of about 2.5 trillion in financial investment is needed.

Twelve-year free public education: To completely exempt tuition and miscellaneous fees as well as parents' invisible expenditures, an annual increase of about 1.5 trillion in targeted subsidies is needed.

2. Dual-track pension system: Absolute equality at the bottom line and distribution according to work at the upper limit (About 5.4 trillion annually) On the issue of pensions, the New Deal will absolutely not practice the absolute egalitarianism of feeding idlers, but will introduce the extremely mature "New Zealand model":

The first layer (Absolute state safety net): No matter if you were a mayor or a farmer before, as long as you reach the statutory retirement age, the state will uniformly distribute a basic pension of 1500 yuan per month without difference from taxes, ensuring that everyone eats their fill, dresses warmly, and is respected in old age. Calculated based on the current approximately 300 million elderly people, the annual expenditure is about 5.4 trillion.

The second layer (Upper limit of personal effort): Establish personal and occupational supplementary annuity accounts. The more diligent you are when you are young and the more money you deposit into your personal account, the higher the total amount you will receive after retirement. The bottom line is absolutely guaranteed by the state, and the upper limit is strived for by personal struggle.

[Total ledger of new rigid livelihood additions]: Healthcare and education (4 trillion) + Basic pension (5.4 trillion) = About 9.4 trillion RMB annually. Facing this 9.4 trillion, the old bureaucrats will cry that there is no money. Good, now let us see, as long as we smash the privilege machine, how much money can we save!

II. Extreme throttling and treasury replenishment: Cutting off four major blood-sucking black holes In the future Chinese Federation, the "taxes" legally paid by ordinary people will all enter the [Federal Treasury]. The money in the treasury will only do two things: maintain the operation of the minimalist state machine and provide a safety net for universal basic livelihood.

Under the operation of the highly AI-ized platform-type government in the future, treasury expenditures will experience a "dimensionality-reduction type" reduction:

1. Extreme slimming of the AI minimalist government (Saves about 8 trillion annually)

The CCP's current "financially supported personnel" is conservatively estimated to be up to 50 million people, consuming tens of trillions of the people's hard-earned wealth every year. In the future, relying on the "Federal Super Digital Hub", complicated approvals for taxation, civil affairs, industry and commerce will all be integrated and mastered by AI, and government administrative expenditures will be reduced to about 1% of the present! Laying off tens of millions of redundant personnel will directly save at least 8 trillion in cash for the treasury every year!

2. Erasing the "stability maintenance black hole" and party affairs expenditures (Saves about 3 trillion annually) The "stability maintenance fee" used by the old system to guard against ordinary people is up to more than 1.4 trillion every year; at the same time, taxpayers also have to spend an astronomical amount of funds to support party committees, official media, and cultural troupes. Under a free constitutional government, these two major blood-sucking black holes will be completely ended. This 3 trillion will be fully transformed into the education and healthcare budget of the ordinary people!

3. Depriving special supplies and high-ranking cadres' privileges (Saves about 1.5 trillion annually) The high-ranking officials in the old system hold excess pensions of several thousands or even tens of thousands per month, and occupy luxurious special-supply hospital wards. The New Deal will implement a one-size-fits-all "equal rights liquidation", depriving all supra-national treatments. Forcibly saving at least 1.5 trillion in cash from the hands of the privileged class every year!

4. Calling a halt to ineffective infrastructure and corruption depletion (Saves about 4 trillion annually) All government expenditures will be open-source on the entire network and use zero-based budgeting, completely cutting off the face-saving projects and ineffective infrastructure massively undertaken by the old system for money laundering. The invisible waste avoided is at least 4 trillion annually!

[Total throttling]: 8 trillion + 3 trillion + 1.5 trillion + 4 trillion = Saves 16.5 trillion annually! (Conclusion: Just the money saved by cutting off bureaucrats and privileges is enough to pay that 9.4 trillion bill for universal healthcare, education, and pensions, and the Federal Treasury still possesses a huge healthy surplus of up to 7 trillion! Without increasing a single cent of tax, the grand livelihood ledger has already been completely settled.)

III. Extreme open-source and fund isolation: Creating a "perpetual motion machine treasury" for 1.4 billion people Since the daily tax balance has already settled the ledger, then where does the money for universal dividends come from? And how should the massive confiscated corruption funds be used? This is the moment when the New Deal demonstrates modern financial wisdom.

In modern civilized countries, the government's money and the ordinary people's money must be completely cut off physically and legally. For China's three most massive gold mountains—land, state-owned enterprises, and natural resources, the federal government and the treasury have no right to use a single cent of the massive wealth they generate! They will be 100% fully injected into a [Chinese Universal Wealth Fund] that is completely independent of the administrative system.

1. The fund's three major absolute cash flows (About 8 trillion remitted annually):

Perpetual land rent of the land bank (About 3 trillion): Abolish the malicious policy of "one-time land selling" which drains the pond to catch the fish. The transparent sub-leasing revenues from national commercial, industrial, and agricultural land transfers will be directly remitted into the fund.

The true profits of monopoly state-owned enterprises (About 4 trillion): Monopoly state-owned enterprises such as tobacco, electricity, and finance are no longer the ATMs of the powerful, and their net profits after tax will be fully handed over to the fund.

Realization of natural resource franchise rights (About 1 trillion): The auction revenues of resources such as minerals, water conservancy, and communication spectrums will be fully merged in.

2. The fund's "dual-track operation": Cash dividend + Investment compound interest Facing the huge wealth of 8 trillion pouring in every year, we will absolutely not engage in the "eating it all and distributing it clean" of killing the chicken to get the eggs, but adopt the most mature operation model of a sovereign fund:

[Universal survival dividend (Directly distributing money)]: Extract 50% (about 4 trillion) of the total revenue of the current year, use it as the "survival dividend", set no threshold, and evenly transfer it into the private bank accounts of the 1.4 billion citizens. Every person can obtain about 3000 yuan of pure cash dividend every year. For a bottom-tier family of five, even doing nothing for a year can increase absolute income by fifteen thousand yuan, completely bidding farewell to extreme poverty.

[Compound interest appreciation pool (Money generates money)]: The remaining 50% (about 4 trillion) will be permanently sealed within the fund pool, left in enterprises for technical research and development or invested in extremely steady high-quality assets globally.

3. The nuclear strike of "currency replacement" and the destination of recovered stolen funds At the beginning of the launch of the New Deal, we will launch an unprecedented financial war: through global fugitive recovery, and at this moment launch the "dimensionality-reduction nuclear strike" of "currency replacement". With a time limit for real-name exchange of new currency, the tens of trillions of cash black money hidden in the basements by corrupt officials will instantly become waste paper (physically eliminating inflation), or be fully confiscated.

But please note: the government will absolutely not directly spend this "one-time windfall" up to tens of trillions! It will all be injected as principal into the "Universal Wealth Fund". Even if it only generates a 5% investment return every year, it can bring an endless stream of 1.5 trillion pure interest to the country. This is the inexhaustible gold mountain we leave to our descendants.

IV. Endgame: The economic nuclear explosion triggered by returning property to the people This grand national ledger has formed a perfect closed loop here: using the money saved by cutting off redundant personnel and privileges, it has completely covered free healthcare, education, and the pension safety net; using half the profits of state-owned assets, it has distributed universal cash dividends; using the confiscated corruption black money, it has established a perpetual interest-bearing sovereign fund.

There is no inflation at all, and no eating the food of tomorrow today.

And this is still just the static inventory. When the "Magna Carta" thoroughly protects private property rights, and when privileges are eliminated, the creativity of the whole society will usher in an unprecedented blowout. When 1.4 billion people no longer worry about seeing a doctor and retirement, the suppressed massive consumption power will instantly detonate the domestic demand market. The explosion of the overall economic plate will naturally double the country's tax base.

We are not drawing a blueprint of utopia, we are just doing what a normal company should do—dismissing the corrupt official bookworms who hold a sinecure, and returning the company's original abundant profits, openly, decently, scientifically, and rigorously to the 1.4 billion lawful shareholders!
